

Today's Stamps Recreate the Wonders of Nature

Gone are the days when postage stamps depicted the heads of state and coats of arms that were such common sights on the 19th Century stamps. Likewise, the monochrome issues of the early 20th Century were gradually replaced by multicolor postage stamps. And today, collectors can collect stunning issues in new, souvenir sheet forms whose pictorial margins skillfully supplement the stamp designs.

Horses, from Antigua & Barbuda

Coral reefs, a wonder of nature from under the seas, from Grenada

One of the most popular of all subjects, the Panda, from Ghana

Illustrated here are a few examples of beautiful works of the beauty of nature, including living forms on the stamps and in the margins the environment in which these life forms are found.

These examples are among the many Nature Topicals that were issued by client nations of the Inter-Governmental Philatelic Corp. To view hundreds of other issues on a wide variety of nature subjects, please visit the IGPC website, www.igpc.com.

Flamingos, from St. Vincent & The Grenadines

And Sea Shells, from St. Vincent & The Grenadines
